The Seidman College of Business will be offering a new seminar in the Winter Term, "Wealth, Community, and Philanthropy." It will be taught by Dr. Michael Layton, GVSU's W.K. Kellogg Community Philanthropy Chair. In this course, students will:

- ◆ Explore the intersection of wealth, business, and philanthropy by examining how business leaders and wealthy individuals impact communities and society through giving.
- ◆ Engage with real-world cases and meet leaders in philanthropy from West Michigan, offering valuable networking and insights into local foundations and community impact.
- ◆ Analyze current controversies in philanthropy, such as the role of billionaires in social change and the balance between philanthropy and democracy.
- ◆ Participate in a hands-on giving experience, a pop-up giving circle, providing an opportunity to engage directly in philanthropy and reflect upon their values and priorities.
